Sailing and seaside

Saint-Quay-Portrieux has five sandy beaches and a beautiful hiking track along the coast: a perfect place for your seaside holidays with family and friends. Thanks to its two ports, Saint-Quay-Portrieux is THE resort to be: traditional sailing, sightseeing boat trips, catamaran... it's up to you

GOOD TO KNOW

Lifeguards on duty from July to August.

Plage du Casino

This beach next to the Casino is one of the most popular sandy beaches in the Côtes d'Armor, and has always been ever since the creation of the seaside resort. Visitors enjoy playing in the waves, swimming in the seawater pool and splashing about in the toddlers' paddling pool.

WE LIKE

Equipped for the whole family and lifeguards on duty from July to August. Direct access to the GR34. Non-smoking beach.

FACILITIES

Convention center, children's beach club, seawater swimming pool, paddling pool, playground, showers, toilets, beach huts, car and bicycle parks. Casino, bars, restaurants and shops.

Plage du Châtelet

This sandy and rocky beach, sheltered by cliffs, is mostly accessible as the tide recedes: then comes the perfect time to explore it. It is located next to the Plage du Casino, and from there, visitors can also get to the seawater pool and paddling pool, great facilities for those who are learning how to swim.

WE LIKE

Well sheltered and lifeguards on duty from July to August. Direct access to the GR34®.

FACILITIES

Seawater swimming pool, showers, toilets, beach huts, car and bicycle parks. Casino, bars, restaurants and shops.

Plage de la Comtesse

A sandy beach, next to the Port, perfect for swimming, with a paddling pool for the little ones. From there, you get an uninterrupted glimpse of the goings-on at the Port. At low tide, explore the Île de la Comtesse, but keep an eye on the tide times!

WE LIKE

Lifeguards on duty from July to August. Île de la Comtesse accessible at low tide times!
Non-smoking beach.

FACILITIES

Showers, toilets, paddling pool, beach huts, picnic table, car and bicycle parking. Port d'Armor, bars, restaurants and shops.

Plage du Portrieux

A sheltered sandy beach at the drying harbour, facing south. Next to the deep-water harbour. Swimming is not permitted there.

WE LIKE

The view on the Portrieux (the drying harbour) and its colorful boats.
Direct access to the GR34® and the Vélomaritime.

FACILITIES

Children's beach club, playground, car and bike parks. Port d'Armor, bars, restaurants and shops.

Plage de la grève Noire

This south-facing beach got its name from the same phenomenon that occurs on the Plage de la Comtesse: the black ilmenite that makes the sand turn black.

WE LIKE

Peaceful and sheltered.
Small sea wall for fishing. Direct access to the GR34®.

FACILITIES

Shower, boat slipway, car park.

Grève de Fonteny

Lying at the foot of a cliff, in a little cove right next to the Bellevue campsite, Grève de Fonteny is a quiet little corner of sand and rock.

WE LIKE

Perfect for a family exploration.
Direct access to the GR34®.

FACILITIES

Paddling pool, car park and picnic tables.

Grève de l'Isnain

This small sand-and-rock beach is lovely and quiet.

WE LIKE

Wild and preserved.
Dogs allowed all year round.

FACILITIES

Pétanque field, car park.

Ports

LE PORTRIEUX

48°38',8 N • 002°49',0 W

Also known as the drying harbour, it has 450 berths including 8 for short stays. Ships used to set sail from here to fish off Newfoundland from 1612 onwards. It still has all the traditional charm of a Breton harbour with moorings on chains secured to concrete blocks and sheltered anchorage in summer, weather permitting.

SAINT-QUAY PORT D'ARMOR 24H/24

VHF9 • 48° 38 ' 92 N • 2° 49' 07 W

A fully equipped modern deep-water marina inaugurated in 1990, accessible 24 hours a day, and sheltered from the dominant winds. The pontoons offer 1030 berths for boats ranging from 6 to 18 meters, and multihulls. Saint-Quay-Portrieux is recognized as the scallop capital of Brittany. The northern part of the harbor is thus dedicated to the fishing fleet.

History and heritage

Saint-Quay-Portrieux was one of the first seaside resorts in Northern Brittany, and a point of departure to go fishing in the Newfoundland waters.

Moulin Saint-Michel

Built in 1830, the windmill overlooks the town and offers a wonderful panoramic view on the Bay of Saint-Brieuc.

There used to be a small chapel dedicated to the archangel Michael where the windmill stands today. The Moulin Saint-Michel has been completely restored and opens occasionally during summer holidays for special events.

Chapelle Notre-Dame de la Garde

Built in 1828, this chapel is unique because it was built as a rotunda. It is dedicated to Notre Dame de la Garde who was worshipped by the sailors returning from long sea journeys in the Newfoundland and Iceland waters, and by their families. The chapel opens occasionally during summer holidays.

Fontaine Saint-Quay

A small pyramidal granite monument stands over the fountain. The water from this spring has always been regarded as miraculous and as having special injury-healing properties.

Île de la Comtesse

The perfect playground for Robinson Crusoes accessible every day at low tide. Nestled between the Pointe du Sémaphore and Saint-Quay Port d'Armor, the tiny Île de la Comtesse, all ruins and greenery, is a heaven of peace and quiet. The island's name probably dates back to the 13th century, as several countesses owned the small island in turn.

Seawater swimming pool

Probably the most famous view of Saint-Quay-Portrieux. It dates back to 1929, when Saint-Quay-Portrieux became a resort. It took only 4 months to build it, quite a technical feat in the 30's. There originally was a diving board tower, but it was removed after several accidents.

Château de Calan

A piece of Moorish architecture on Breton soil. The Count of Calan was a diplomat in the Middle-East and built the castle in 1880. The second owner finished its construction after 1900, keeping the Moorish style which was fancy during the universal exhibition. Today, the villa is a private house.

Pointe du Sémaphore

The Semaphore of Saint-Quay-Portrieux was built on a promontory 100 metres above sea-level. It allows to keep watch over the maritime traffic of the Saint-Brieuc Bay. At the foot of the semaphore, on the customs officers' path, there is a panoramic view from the Bréhat archipelago to the Cap Fréhel. A viewpoint indicator allows you to locate all the main landmarks along the coastline and across the bay.

Chapelle Sainte-Anne

The construction of the Chapelle Sainte-Anne was financed by the sale of fish in 1770. The labour and materials were graciously provided by the inhabitants. Restored in 1929, it houses a painting representing the drying harbour in 1777. The chapel opens occasionally during summer holidays.

Île Harbour

1.8km away from the coast, facing the Pointe du Sémaphore, the lighthouse indicates the hazardous rocks of the Saint-Quay islands. Built in 1847, the light can be seen from more than 13km out and is now automated.

Leisure activities

In summer or winter, whether you want to move, rest, learn, contemplate, bask or initiate yourself, there will always be something for you.

Flavours

Scallop capital of Brittany

COQUILLE SAINT-JACQUES OR PECTEN

Scallops live mainly in sandy areas. The eggs are laid in the summer, then the larvae drift in the sea before finding a place to attach themselves and grow. Once they have reached a millimeter in size, they detach themselves from their base and live freely on the sandy bottom. They are particularly vulnerable to a wide range of predators. However, they grow quickly and are soon able to escape when attacked.

The minimum legal size for scallops is 10 cm (10.2 cm in the case of those fished in the Saint-Brieuc Bay); scallops can reach this size after 2 or 3 years. An astounding fact about this species of shellfish is that it contains roe or 'coral' in the summer. From October to April, the period during which they are fished, they are known as 'coquilles blanches' (white scallops that do not contain coral).

SCALLOP FISHING

From October to April, fishermen fish scallops 2 times a week, for 45 minutes only! These restrictions were implemented in order to protect the scallop population. When scallop fishing begins, no time to rest: fishermen put the scallop dredges into the sea (large metallic nets used to scrape the sand and collect shells), then pull them out, sort the shells, and throw the small ones back to the sea. When the 45 minutes are over, fishermen return to the port quickly to land their catch before it goes to auction. You can watch the arrival of the boats but the auction is not open to the public as it is reserved for professionals.

The crepe challenge

BRETON EXPERIENCE

If you want to learn how to make an authentic Breton crêpe, then this is the right place – to produce a good crêpe! In Saint-Quay-Portrieux, Géraldine will be delighted to give you a little lesson in crepe making, and you will have the opportunity to try your hand at using the traditional “billig” and to become the expert “crêpier” you always knew you were.
